<sup>3</sup> Due to evolving health and safety conditions, this is accurate as of May 17, 2022.

<sup>4</sup> Due to evolving health and safety conditions, this can include curbside pick-up of food and/or pre-packaged food boxes/bags.

<sup>5</sup> Electronic Benefits Transfer (EBT) is an electronic system that allows a CalFresh participant to pay for food using their CalFresh benefits. Capability for this varies across campuses and campus vendors.

<sup>6</sup> In the current environment, CalFresh application assistance is offered at all campuses via a number of ways (depending on local context). This can include support via email, telephone, and video call.

<sup>7</sup> Basic Needs Ambassador Training prepares students, faculty, and staff with information and knowledge to be champions for students' basic needs in and outside of the classroom.

<sup>8</sup> Clothing closets provide students with clothing, particularly business attire for job interviews. Often, this program is operated by other areas of the campus.
